The Jubilee.

LONDON, June 21.-The press is requested to state that the number of congratulatory telegrams from public podies and private individuals is so overwhelmingly large, that it is impossible to answer them individually. The sible to answer them individually. The Queen is greatly touched and gratified by such expressions of loyalty and devotion from all classes of her subjects. On the advice of Lord Salisbury, junited honors will be conferred on several liberal—calonists. The new peers to be created in honor of the Queen's jubice, will include Sir William Armstonia, Sir Jim's McNaughten, McGaref Hoggand Right Hon. George Sclater Booth,

THE OPESING.

The first day of the fifty first year of the reign of Queen Victoria opened with perfect summer weather. Thousands periest summer weather. Thousands of people who yesterday selected locations slong the route of to-day's procession, in order to retain them, occanied them all night. A steady stream of carriages and pedestrians poured constantly all night through the city from all directions towards. West End. constantly all night through the city from all directions towards West End. At 30 cines the line of route was a compact mass of people. Everybody, despite the discomfort and crowding, manifested the utmost good humor. The scene at Westminster Abbey was most brilliant. Every seat was filled, and every personage present was a distinguished personage. It seemed as if every braility the world over had sent one or more of its representative persons to do house to Endand's Queen. These never, probably, in modern times, assembled under one roof an audience so well and so brilliantly arranged. Every man present entitled to wear a uniform or decoration had both on. When this andience was all seated the scene presented was incomparable. When the Marquis of Salisbury and Gladistone entered Westminister Abbey, they were both loudly cheered. Many bords and fadjes were so anxious to scene their positions that they came without breakfasting. It was a strange sight to see flasks and sandwiches exchanged in such a crowd, and largely was the emphasized arrivogers.

changed in such a crowd, and largely used by numberless aristocrats unable to withstand hunger or thirst. This business, when added to the hum at times seemed irreverent even on a jubilee day in Westminister. The line of procession fron Buckingham Palace to Westminister was as follows: From the Portal along Constitution Hill, Picadully, Regent Street, Waterloo Palace, Pall Mail, East Cockspur Street, Northumberland Avenue, Thames embankment, Bridge Street to the Abbey. The line of ronte was kept by nearly 10,000 troops, representing all branches of the service, in addition to 600 boys from the naval training ships, who were drawn up at the base of Nelson monument. In addition to the military many thoustimes seemed irreverent even on a jubilee addition to the military many thous-and police, both mounted and on foot, and police, both mounted and on foot, were on duty. A particular feature was that the two services were equally honored, the guards lining one side of the road-way at Buckingham Palace gates and on the other side blue jackets were posted. The same services were also represented in like manner at the sufrance to Westminister Abber. the first royal procession was comtrance to Westminister Abbey. ces and a few minor Ger-

At sight of her thousands of voices were lifted up in cheers, the applause being accompanied by the music of voices. many military bands stationed in front of the palance. The Queen did not wear the State robes, but dressed in black. Her carriage was drawn by eight ponies. The Prince of Wales, Duke of Edinburgh, Duke of Conbuke of Eduburgh, Duke of Con naught, Crown Prince of Germany, Manyuls of Lorne, Prince Christian, of Schlewig-Holstein, and Prince Henry, of Battenberg, her sons-in-law, and Prince Albert Victor and George of Wales, Prince Alfred, of Edinburgh, and Prince William, of Prussia, her grandsons, all rode in full uniform be side the Queen's coach as a body guard. When the jeople at the palace gates had shouled themselves hoarse by cheering, they continued to cry out "Long life to the Prince and Princess of Wales." The Queen, as she left the palace, seemed to be in excellent spirits, and she smiled and bowed graciously to the people on every side.

On reaching Regent Circus, where six main streets converge, the sight was a memorable one, the streets being all splendidly decorated. Many Americans had secured seats at a palatial commercial establishment in Waterloo Place, and joined in the enthusiasm as warmly as the English. At Traifalgar Square nothing but heads were to be seen. The crowd here was tremendous, and completely eclipsed any that had assembled at the great political gatherings of recent years. When the procession reached the Thames embankment, the enthusiasm was indescribable. All along the embankment where not cocupied by public gardens, seats and galleries had been erected. The ground floor of the Abbey was concealed by lofty grand stands, called "St. Margarets," the seats of which sold for 5 guineas each. guineas each.

THE RECEPTION.

On the procession nearing the Abbey the troops saluted, guns were fired, bells on churches rang out merry peals and flags were run up, the cheering being continuous till the Queen passed in the west door. After passing through the vestibule. Her Majesty was conducted to the grand dais under the Lanter Tower. She was surrounded by thirty-two members of the royal family. The scene in the Abbey when the Queen entered was dazzling; 10 000 people were seated; they all arose; the women discarded their wrans and revealed the full splendor of their beauty and attire. Three tiers of galieries have been built in the Abbey with seats for 10,000 Peers and their wives were seated in the south transept; ambassadors and the diplomatic corps were seated right and left of the peers; members of the House of Commons were placed in the north transept; soats for members of reigning families of Europe, etc., were within the communion rails. All great learned societies and corporations were represented, while notables of law, science, art and agriculture and workingmen's representatives from all parts of the kingdom had seats allotted them. The Queen was evidently profoundly impressed with the scene. She was noticeably pale when she appeared on the raised dais. She soon, however, recovered and regained the bright and pleasant aspect that she had borne all the morning. bells on churches rang out merry peals

When the services, which were conducted according to the programme, were completed, the Queen's sons kinelt and kined their cheeks in return. The Princesses were next to go through with the osculatory exercises. The Queen's kinsed some of the latter twice. Especially was this notable in the cases of the Princess of the Princess was followed by general handshaking among the royalty and noblity. The Princesses wore light dresses, One of the features of the service was the performance of "Athalie," the Queen took her departure, returning to Buckingham Palace by the same route as she took just half a century ago. At the conclusion of the services the Royal cortege returned to Buckingham Palace, Throngs awaiting the return of the cortege repeated the enthusiastic demonstrations which greeted them on the way to the abbey. The Queen, on her arrival, seemed overcome by the loyalty displayed by her subjects.

The Queen rode facing the horses, and sat alone.

WASHINGTON, June 21 .- Following is that she entered the Abbey precisely at the President's letter presenting his jubilee congratulations to Queen Victoria:

GROVER CLEVELAND, PRESIDENT OF THE United States

Gr. et and Good Friend-In the name and on behalf of the people of the United States, I present their sincere felicitations upon the arrival of the fiftieth anniversary of Your Majesty's accession to the crown of Great Britain, and I but utter the general voice of my fellow-countrymen in wish-ing for your people a prolongation Britain, and I but utter the general voice of my fellow-countrymen in wishing for your people a prolongation of the reign so marked with advance in the popular well being-physical, moral, and intellectual. It is justice, and not adulation, to acknowledge the debt of gratinde and respect due to your personal virtues for their important influence in producing and causing the prosperous and well-ordered condition of affairs now generally prevailing throughout your dominions.

May your life be prolonged, and peace, honor and prosperity, bless the people over whom you have been called to rule. May libeity flourish throughout your emp're under just and equal laws, and your government be strong in the affections of all who live under it. And I pray God to have your majesty in his holy keeping.

Done at Washington this 7th day of May, 1887.

GROVER CLEYELAND

New York, June 21 .- A solemn re. quiem mass was celebrated in the Church of the Holy Innocents this morning, for the repose of the souls of 150,000 Irish, who died of starvation during the reign of Queen Victoria. Rev. Dr. John Larkin acted as celebrant.

THE ENVIOUS GARLS.

Panis, June 21 .- The Journal Des Debats, in an article on the jubilee celebration, says: We cordially envy celebration, says: We cordially envy Englishmen and would give a great deal could we ever be what they are to-day—a people mad with joy and happiness. This universal homage is paid not only to the Queen but to the woman who has given an example of two great virtues of royalty—gravity and dignity. Her influence has been great and salutary and her great merit is that in using her prerogative for the public weal she has never been tempted to strain its exercise.

Berlin, June 21—The Post says: What makes Germany a sympathetic onlooker at the jubilee is the pl-ntitude of events which have crowded the last half century. This is a period of importance in the world's history, not only for Englishmen, but for the whole civilized world. English people will feel they have great reason for tratitude which cannot be better expressed than by more and more far-sighted and resolute facing of the great and inevitable tasks of the future. celebration, says: We cordially enry

The Pacific Railway Commission.

Омана, June 21.—General Traffic Manager Thomas L. Kimball, of the Union Pacific, was examined by the Pacific Railway commission to-day, regarding the subject of deleating legislation hostile to the company, he had lation hostile to the company, he had generally undertaken to persuade the legislators that such legislation was not for the interest of their constituents. He did not know of the use of money by the company to influence legislation. Members of the legislatures usually had free passes offered them, and if not offered would ask for them, especially anti-monopoly members, whom he defined as men who believed anything was justifiable to defeat whatever was wanted by a railroad company. In reply to a question Mr. Kimball admitted he had sometimes influenced nomination, election or defeat of candidates. Where the men were nominated extion, election or defeat of candidates. Where the men were nominated; expressly for the purpose of attacking the interests of the road, they felt justified in doing everything possible legitimately to defeat them. In some such cases, he had used money—not the company's money, but his own—and during some campaign of the past he might have paid some of the expenses or the company, but this practice has been his own political business. He had at times requested, but not instructed employes to vote in the interests of the company. Witness was examined at great length on "Constructive mileage," and the relation of the Union Pacific to its branches. Without those branches he maintained the Union Pacific would be bankrupt in a year. He denied that be bankrupt in a year. He denied that be bankrupt in a year. He denied that the main line had, by a plan observed, been made to contribute to the support of the branches.

James W. Davis, of Omaha, one of contractors who supplied ties for construction of the Union Pacific, testified that the ties cost 60 cents to 90 cents apiece. On being informed that Jay Gould had testified that some of them cost $5 apiece. He said Gould was misinformed. Davis said he was, "by the rascally injunction orders of Tweed's creatures in the New York courts," swindled out of $200.600, which would have been his profits on the Union Pacific contract.
